Give Your Family the Two Things We All Wish We Had More Of

Time & Money

Losing someone you love is one of the hardest things a family will ever face. The grief alone is overwhelming. But on top of that grief, there are immediate financial pressures — and one of the biggest is the mortgage payment. When a family loses an income, the house payment doesn't stop. The bills keep coming. And the last thing a grieving family should have to do is rush into a major financial decision.

What This Plan Does for Your Family

The Payment Protection Plan gives your spouse or family the money to cover the mortgage payment for a specified period of time — 6 months, 8 months, or 12 months — while they figure out what's next. Keep the home. Sell the home. Downsize. Whatever makes sense for their situation.

You know it's not a good idea to make a big financial decision when you're grieving. This plan makes sure your family doesn't have to. It gives them the time to grieve and the breathing room to make thoughtful decisions — without the pressure of wondering how the next house payment will be made.

How It Works

You Choose Your Coverage

Select 6, 8, or 12 months of mortgage payment protection.

Your Family Receives the Benefit

In the event of your death, the benefit is paid directly to your family.

They Decide What's Best

Keep the home, sell it, or take the time they need to figure it all out.

After Everything Is Said and Done

After the funeral, your family doesn't have to rush to clean the house out, go through all of your belongings, or figure out who gets what. This plan gives them the opportunity to grieve and have the time they need to figure it all out.

The housing market may be strong, but it still takes time to get a home ready to sell — cleaning, repairs, staging, listing. None of that happens overnight, especially when a family is grieving. Whether it's 6, 8, or 12 months, this plan bridges that gap so your family can handle everything on their terms.

Why Families Choose This Plan

- ✓ Time to Grieve
Your family can process their loss without financial panic
- ✓ Time to Decide

Who Needs a Payment Protection Plan?

If You Have a Spouse

When a spouse passes away, the financial impact goes far beyond the funeral. There's an immediate loss of income. Life insurance claims take time to process. Retirement accounts may be affected. Bills don't wait. This plan gives the surviving spouse breathing room to let the financial dust settle — without the added pressure of figuring out how to make the next mortgage payment.

If You Are Single or Widowed

Your children or family members may be the ones handling your estate. Most of them are already stretched financially. Adding a mortgage payment on top of everything else could make it impossible to keep the home long enough to sell it properly. This plan makes sure they don't have to carry that burden while managing your affairs.

When death happens, the bank doesn't stop looking for the mortgage payment. This plan bridges that gap — covering the payments while your family figures out their next steps. No one should have to make a life-changing financial decision while they're grieving.

How Much Coverage Do You Need?

It's simple: take your monthly mortgage payment and multiply it by the number of months you want covered. Here are a few examples:

Monthly Payment	6 Months	8 Months	12 Months
$1,200/mo	$7,200	$9,600	$14,400
$1,500/mo	$9,000	$12,000	$18,000
$1,800/mo	$10,800	$14,400	$21,600
$2,200/mo	$13,200	$17,600	$26,400

Coverage amounts shown are for illustration purposes. Your actual quote will be based on your specific mortgage payment.

The death of a loved one is plenty to deal with, without having to figure out how in the world to pay for the house note.
